

When using frameworks instead of solid beams, building materials can be used more efficiently. The timber is mainly subjected to tensile and compressive section forces parallel to the fibre, so that the advantages in terms of both strength and rigidity can be achieved. The efficiency of the connections at the junctions is crucial for cost-effectiveness. The structure can be optimised to the highest load level by the targeted use of hardwood.

more infos